CALLED TO ORDER

OPENING OF THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION IN CHICAGO.

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN THURSTON MAKES A ROUSING SPEECH

In Which He Refers to Blaine as the Acknowledged Leader of the Republican Party—The Outlook Respecting the Final Choice of the Convention—Chauncey I. Filley and His Masses Hat—Scenes and Incidents.

CHICAGO, June 19.—A strong breeze, that made the big stripes of bunting in which the exterior of the auditorium was enveloped, flap like the sails of a West India merchantman in an October gale swept over Lake Michigan landwards, this morning. Very grateful it proved to the thousands of perishing patriots, that from an early hour gathered in front of the great building and gazed longingly upon the doors, through whose portals they had no open sesame. Inside the building all was bustle and confusion.

Everything but the arrangement and numbering of the press seats were completed by 10 o'clock. Unfortunately the latter, the really most important work, had been left until the last moment, and greatly to their dismay the legion of correspondents were compelled to wait outside of the barriers and permitted to fill the air with maledictions upon the management until within a few minutes of the time appointed for calling the convention to order.

EXTERIOR OF UNFINISHED AUDITORIUM. The delegates themselves were slow in assembling, and the same might be said of the visitors. Between the police and the plethora of assistants, sergeants-at-arms and other subordinate functionaries as much red tape was brought into use as if the fortunate holders of tickets were about to enter into the kingdom of heaven.

Once within the building, however, indignation was quickly changed into exclamations of delight. It was like a transformation from a barren plain into fairyland.

CHAIRMAN JONES OPENING THE CONVENTION. With its myriads of electric jets in arches, in stars and diamonds, in spheres, in almost every conceivable design of art with its oiled, bannered, bunting streamers of a thousand hues, the immense interior was a symphony of color a magnificent spectacle of the art decorative.

The chairman's platform was simply a floral bower. Nothing could be seen of the front of the desk upon which eight years ago descended the gavel that announced the nomination of James A. Garfield, and four years later the success of James G. Blaine. It was one huge bank of roses.

To the right and left the American flag was patterned in flared shields, while on the top of either end, two huge and artistically arranged bouquets, attached to arches of sinilar, which in turn connected with the American flags, which entwined the end pillars and combined to make the stand an arcade and bower.

Directly beneath the chair were pictures of Gen. Logan and Grant wreathed in immortal, while from the first balcony, portraits of all the Republican presidents from Washington to Arthur looked down upon the delegates. The New York, Michigan and Massachusetts delegations, which had been honored with the front seats directly facing the speaker's stand were among the first to arrive, but very little enthusiasm greeted their appearance.

Twelve o'clock, at which hour, so said Chairman Jones, Monday, the convention would be promptly called to order, less than half the delegates were in their seats while the chairs in the balconies allotted to guests were less than one-third filled. In the next five minutes the western and northwestern delegates came in rapidly, but the southern men, especially those from Tennessee, the Carolinas, and Mississippi were still lagging and left a big hole in the seating space to the left of the chair.

The Virginians too were considerably behind, and many opera glasses were vainly levelled in quest of the diminutive Mahone and the doughty Wise, who head the rival delegations. Chauncey M. Depew with a genial smile overspreading his countenance, gilded in unobserved, and so did Governor Foraker. In fact the crowd either failed to recognize distinguished men who made their appearance or the weather was too warm for enthusiasm to assert itself so early in the day.

At 12:35 that grizzled veteran and first candidate of the Republican party for president, Gen. John C. Fremont, was escorted to the platform by a sergeant-at-arms, and when he caught the eye of the floor and galleries he was honored with the first burst of applause that had been given so far during the morning.

By the time that Wise and Mahone came in the convention was a sea of waving fans and they lost the reception which might have fallen to them had they observed the rules of punctuality.

Half-past twelve and the band galvanized into life by the frantic efforts which some of the assistant secretaries had for some time been making to attract its attention struck up a tune, but a sign from Chairman Jones at 12:33 brought it to a full stop and the convention was called to order.

Then Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus was introduced to lead the convention in prayer. He thanked the Lord for the intelligence and courage under which the banners of the Republican party had gone forth to conquests and prayed that the convention might be dominated by good purposes for the glory of God and the good of the people. Blessings were asked for the leaders of the party and for those occupying high places in the administration.

"We invoke Thy blessing," said the reverend gentleman, "upon that great soldier, the captain of our armies who lies so near to death. O, Lord, touch him tenderly by Thy hand. Comfort him by Thy spirit and restore him to the nation that loves him, with all health and with all hope."

This reference to Gen. Sheridan was followed by a burst of applause which evidently jarred upon the preacher's sense of propriety, as evidenced by the grave expression which stole over his features as the cheering progressed.

Then the call for the convention was read in a ringing tone by Secretary Fessenden and the references to the tariff, to the protection of American labor, to the accumulation of surplus, the demand for a free, honest ballot and a fair count, and the question of the admission of the territories were all loudly cheered, especially that relating to the tariff.

The reading concluded, Chairman Jones read an address. He spoke so low that from the start there were cries of "louder" even from those in the front benches. He prophesied success for the Republican party, and said that thanks to President Cleveland and his southern allies, they had thrown off their disguise and declared themselves as the advocates of free trade. The more he read the weaker grew his voice, until the convention got into a hum of conversation and the effort of the chairman was little better than a dumb show addressed to the incoherent-breathing bouquets.

He was understood to allude to the record of Great Britain on protection and free trade, and to trace the growth of the tariff reform movement or of the "tariff conspirators" from the days of Jackson, on through the times of Buchanan, a copious quotation being made from a speech once made by the latter. Then he referred to the achievements of the Republican party; how it had abolished slavery, and elevated the people. He declared that the country did not want to go back to the old Democratic days of sloth and ignorance. The country still had the benefit of the laws passed by the Republican party, and it still had a majority in the senate to protect the interests of the people.

At this juncture the Hon. John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, who was Monday chosen by the National committee as temporary chairman, had moved up to the right of Mr. Jones and the latter lost no time in introducing his successor. But no sooner had the spectacled Nebraskan bowed in response to the cheer of welcome than a white-headed, broad-shouldered delegate was on his feet in the Kansas section. In calop tones he announced that Kansas had a candidate of its own for temporary chairman. Mr. Jones responded rather testily that the gentleman before them was the temporary chairman. But the Kansas man wasn't to be suppressed so easily, and he said that his colleagues declined to be responsible for the action of the National committee, which it regarded as a great mistake, and it demanded a call of the roll in order that it might place the nomination of Hon. William Warner, of Missouri.

At this there were both applause and hisses, but Thurston, without noticing the motion, began to deliver his address, thus establishing the precedent that the choice of a National committee for temporary officers need not have been ratified by the convention. The Kansas man kept upon his feet, however, until he said that this was not one of his fortunate days, and then he slowly and reluctantly resumed his seat.

Mr. Thurston spoke as follows:

"GENTLEMEN OF THE CONVENTION: I am deeply sensible of the distinguished honor you have conferred upon me as the presiding officer of your temporary organization. I am also mindful of the grave responsibilities of the position, and if they are successfully met it will be due to the continuance of your generous favor and the bestowal of your loyal assistance.

I have no words in which to fittingly express my heartfelt appreciation of your confidence. I thank you, gentlemen, not for myself alone, but for that grand and growing west which never disappoints the expectations of the Republican party.

It came from a state whose vast domain has been largely appropriated by the surviving veterans of the army of the republic under the beneficent provisions of the homestead and peremption laws enacted by a Republican congress. And true to the heroic recollection of the past, the homesteaders of the west still march on under the banner of Republicanism. In victory and defeat, in sunshine and storm, in prosperity and adversity, this mighty west retains the courage of its convictions and holds that devotion to principle though it brings defeat, is better than success achieved by broken vows and political dishonor. We are met in National convention for deliberation and conference. The Republican party of the United States relies upon the wisdom of its assembly.

THE CONVENTION IN SESSION.

bled delegates for such action as will insure success. If we are prepared to honestly and fairly meet the supreme issues of the hour with a clear, fearless and ringing declaration of principles, and to nominate a ticket which will commend itself to the loyalty and intelligence of the country, we can grandly win. We enter upon the proceedings of this convention prepared to sacrifice individual judgment to the wisdom of the majority and to lay down personal preferences on the altar of party success.

"When our candidates are chosen, we will all join with heart and soul in the grand chorus of rejoicing, and the rainbow of our harmony shall give certain promise of the glory of a victorious morning in November. When the Democratic party at the close of the last presidential election robbed us of a victory honestly and fairly won, we patiently waited for the certain coming of the justice of the years. We hoped and believed that 1888 would right the great National wrong of 1884. Right it not only for the Republican party, but also for the grand and glorious candidates whose names were the inspiration of that wonderful campaign. The infinite wisdom of all wise Providence has otherwise decreed.

"One of them, the citizen soldier, the warrior statesman, the black eagle of Illinois, has been summoned by the silent messenger to report to his commander beyond the river. But, although John A. Logan is dead in the body, yet he lives again in the illuminated pages of his country's most splendid history; lives in the grateful love of a free people whose union he so gallantly fought to preserve; lives in the blessings of a down-trodden race, whose freedom he so manfully struggled to achieve; lives in the future song and story of a hero worshipping world; and along the highway of the nation's glory, side by side with old John Brown, Abraham Lincoln and Ulysses S. Grant, his soul goes marching on.

"The other, that gallant leader, the cavalier of American politics, the glory of Republicanism and the nightmare of Democracy, our Henry of Navarre, is seeking in foreign travel his long needed relaxation and rest from the wearisome burdens of public life and service. With the sublime magnanimity of his incomparable greatness he has deduced to the infinite pleasure of supporting him in this convention. Desiring, above all things, party harmony and success, he has stepped from the certain ladder of his own laudable ambition that some other man may climb to power. As his true friends, we can not, dare not commit the political crime of disobedience to his expressed will. We can not place him at the head of the ticket, but we make him commander-in-chief at the head of the forces in the field where he will be invincible.

"And, though James G. Blaine may not be our president, yet he remains our uncrowned king wielding the baton of acknowledged leadership, supreme in the allegiance of his devoted followers. Honored and respected by all honest and loyal men, the greatest living American and the worthy object of our undying love. But the Republican party is not left without great men to place upon its ticket. We have that honest, able and experienced financier, statesman and senator from Ohio, and his no less distinguished colleagues from Iowa, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin, represent to us gallant soldiers, while New York, New Jersey, Kansas, Connecticut and other states of worthy and favorite sons. From this splendid galaxy of political stars we cannot choose amiss.

"The Republican party points with pride to the great achievements of its past and offers as an earnest of its future faithfulness an unbroken record of services performed for freedom, union and National prosperity. It was born of the irrepressible desire to protect the slave from the lash of the master, and to save our civilization from the blighting curse of its crime against humanity. It performed the sacred mission of protecting the republic from secession and disunion, and in the latter time it succeeded in protecting the credit and currency of the nation from repudiation and inflation.

"Its platform epitomized stand for the protection of popular government on the American continent. Stands for the protection of all governmental and international rights from restriction or invasion. Stands for the protection of the life, liberty and protection of all the immunities and privileges of American citizenship. Stands for the protection of the ballot box, from the crimes of intimidation, robbery and subterfuge. Stands for the protection of American commerce, American manufacture and American agriculture, from destructive foreign competition. Stands for the protection of home invention, home skill and home labor against the free trade heresies which would pauperize and degrade them all. Stands for the protection of the people from the unjust and oppressive exaction and combination of aggregated capital and corporate power. Stands for the protection of both capital and corporation from confiscation and mob violence and above all, stands for the protection of the sanctity and happiness of the American home.

"It welcomes to our shores the down-trodden and oppressed of every land, but it insists that the inestimable blessings of American citizenship purchased with the priceless blood of our heroes and martyrs shall be extended to those only who are in full sympathy and accord with the fundamental principles of our government. It demands that the law of the land shall be a shield only to those who obey it, and that for the Anarchist, the Communist and the criminal American justice has nothing to offer but the sword.

"The reconstructed Democracy has now been in power nearly four years. Its administration has been most satisfactory to those who hold office under it. Its justice to the disabled soldier has won golden opinions from those who gave them their wounds. Its financial management has been safe because of its inability to destroy the resulting prosperity of Republican legislation.

"There are those in this land who seem to believe that the mission of the Republican party is at an end. That the emancipation proclamation, Appomattox and the constitutional amendments are at once the monuments of its glory and the grave stones of its demise. But the work of the Republican party will never be done until every American citizen enters into his unquestioned inheritance of liberty, equal rights and justice.

"There are those in the land who insist that the Republican party keeps alive the old time sectional feeling, and that it refuses to let the dead past bury the dead. The Republican party longs and prays for the coming of the millennium of its hope, when in spirit and in truth Mason and Dixon's line will be blotted out forever. It proposes to break down the barriers of unpleasant memories with the hope of a new prosperity.

"The great distinctive issue of the present campaign is the issue of the tariff. To the support of protective tariff, there will rise up an overwhelming army of intelligent thoughtful and practical men, and the east and the west, the north and the south will join hands together to forever exterminate in this republic the pernicious doctrine of free trade.

"When Robert Bruce, king of Germany, lay upon his dying bed he requested that his heart should be taken from his inanimate body borne by knightly hands to the Savior's sepulchre. After his death, James, earl of Douglas, undertook the sacred mission, and with the heart encased in a golden casket set out upon his pilgrimage to the Holy Land. On their way thither, himself and comrades were set upon by a great host of Moorish warriors. Though they fought with all the valor of mortal men they were borne backward by sheer force of numbers, and their overthrow seemed certain.

"When Douglas, drawing from his bosom the priceless casket, cast it far out into the midst of the on-coming host and cried out: Lead on, heart of Bruce, we will follow thee, and the Knights of Scotland, never defeated while following Bruce, pushed forward and won the day. Let this convention find a Douglas for our Bruce. He will take the soul of our great leader into the golden casket of his love, and with it lead us on to certain and splendid victory."

Frequent applause greeted the opening sentences of the chairman's speech but it swelled into a torrent when he reached his references to Blaine, "the cavalier of American politics and the nightmare of Democracy," caused the convention to applaud again and again. But even this was nothing compared with the demonstration with which both galleries and floor received the declaration that the party cannot and must not commit the political crime of disobedience to his will. This evoked cheers which were several times repeated and accompanied by waving of flags and other tokens of exuberance.

When the different candidates were named by the speaker, Sherman and Allison received the weight of the applause, but it was noticed that he refrained from mentioning the soldier judge of Illinois. When he classed the Anarchists with the criminal there were expressions of approval, but when he said that the administration had for four years performed its duties with satisfaction, the audience sat dumb and surprised until he added, "to its officeholders."

The speaker's voice penetrated every nook and corner of the hall, his attitude was erect, his gestures appropriate and he deserved in full measure the prolonged and vigorous appreciation which came from the vast audience when the closing words came from his lips.

Silence restored the rest of the roll of temporary officers was read, leading out with C. W. Frisby, of Michigan, Michael Rickard, of Wisconsin, and W. M. Rowell, Tennessee, as secretaries. This also failed to be submitted to the convention for ratification but no objection was made to this course.

"Mr. Chairman," said ex-Congressman Horr, but just at that moment the chairman pushed an electric button, the band struck up a medley of National airs and Mr. Horr stepped back into his seat with a deep sigh of disapproval. The convention kept time with its feet to "Yankee Doodle," "Marching Through Georgia," finally bursting out into song, applauded in a kind of reverent manner when the strains of "America" broke upon the air and grew vocal again when the National hymn gave way to "Star Spangled Banner."

When the music had ceased Mr. Horr was recognized. He wanted, in behalf of the Michigan delegation, to present to the convention a gavel made out of the wood from the oak under which the Republican party was organized July 6, 1854, in Jackson, Mich. In accepting the gavel Mr. Thurston said he would at once proceed to pound the daylight out of the Democratic party.

The following resolution of sympathy with Gen. Sheridan was adopted by a rising vote: "The delegates to the Republican National convention representing the surviving comrades of the distinguished soldier and general of the army, Phil. H. Sheridan, and resenting also the living principles for which he so gallantly fought and triumphed during the great era of the war, send him their sincere congratulations on the prospect of Blaine on Thurman.

In his "Twenty Years in Congress," James G. Blaine pays a handsome tribute to the Hon. A. G. Thurman, Democratic nominee for Vice President. He says of Judge Thurman: "His rank in the Senate was established from the day he took his seat, and was never lowered during his period of service. He was an admirably disciplined debater, was fair in his method of statement, logical in his argument, honest in his conclusion. He had no tricks in discussion, no catch-phrases to secure attention, but was always direct and manly. His mind was not pre-occupied and engrossed with political contests and affairs of State. His retirement from the Senate was a serious loss to his party, a loss, indeed, to the body. He left behind him the respect of all with whom he had associated during twelve years of honorable service."

Protection Nothing But Monopoly. "Politicians dearly love to play the fool," says the Chicago Herald. "As presented to the convention, the platform of the Minnesota Republicans contained this plank:

We demand that the imposition of duties on imports shall be limited to the necessities of the Government, economically administered.

"Objections were made, and after debate the clause was stricken out and the following emanation of stupidity was substituted:

But while adopting protection, we demand that the duties on imports be so adjusted as not to foster monopoly.

This is a good deal like a convention declaring in favor of 'prohibition so adjusted as not to injure the whisky traffic.' "Protection is nothing but monopoly. Were it not for the monopoly which it confers nobody would want it."

A Busted Boom.

Hon. W. O. Bradley's boom for Vice President on the Republican ticket has been heard from at last. The Bourbon News says some one stuck a pin in it at Chicago and it has collapsed. Mayor W. W. Patterson, of Ashland, (who is at Chicago) commenting on Bradley's chances, said:

"The delegation will vote for him solidly, but beyond that I don't see where he is going to cut any figure. This thing of each man going to bushwacking for him is something I don't exactly relish. Bradley is a young man, and the Kentucky Republicans have certainly done their share for him. While I am loyal to my friends, I am here to select a winning combination. It's nonsense to gossip about placing a Kentuckian on the ticket. That State is irretrievably Democratic, and all the world knows it. Our nominees have got to come from doubtful districts."

CHARLES DICKENS, son of the great novelist, says there are no doubts about Mr. Cleveland's re-election, and thinks he is the best, most honest and honorable President we have had since Lincoln.

SOME of the enthusiastic Republicans of this city think Blaine and Alger will be nominated at Chicago, and are betting that way one to two. Several such bets were made this morning, the takers being Democrats.

Mrs. Phoebe Chesley, Peterson, Clay County, Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town: "I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and am able to do all to Electric Bitters for having renewed my youth, and removed completely all disease and pain." Try a bottle—50 cts. and $1, at J. J. THAT SCOTT MEDAL.

Something of the Interesting History Connected With the Relic.

The finding of the gold medal presented by Virginia to General Winfield Scott in memory of his distinguished services during the Mexican war has been referred to once or twice by the BULLETIN. Colonel George S. Jones, a special pension examiner stationed at Georgetown, O., was here a few days ago and the BULLETIN had an opportunity of examining the handsome relic. He got possession of it in Adams County, and the following is a brief history of it and its travels as taken from a special to a Cincinnati paper:

In Jan. 6, 1864, Lexington, Va., was captured by the Union forces.

The Ninety-first Ohio Volunteers were the first to enter the town. The cadets who occupied the institute (Virginia Military Institute) used the six pieces of stationary artillery in its defense in the engagement. After removing some of the relics from the building, such as busts of Generals Washington and Scott, and some smaller articles, the building was fired, and together with Governor Letcher's house, was burned to the ground.

A day or so after the battle Thomas Thompson, of Company E, Ninety-first Ohio, who had been wounded, was lying on the ground where some comrades were tossing something around among themselves. At last John Stivers tossed it to Thompson, and after looking over its round and curiously-figured shape, offered it back to Stivers, who said: "I don't want it; have no use for it; you can keep it."

Thompson, seeing it had pretty designs and neatly arranged letters on it, dropped it into his knapsack. He could not read, and did not understand what it was, but carried it until mustered out in 1865. No one attached any importance to it, thinking it was worth nothing, and when Thompson arrived at his home in Bentonville, Adams County, O., he still had it, and kept it two or three years as a plaything for his children. Mill Shipley, a gunsmith, happening to see it, concluded it would make good finger-rings, and purchased it from Thompson for 50 cents and the promise of one of the rings.

When Shipley had the medal on his bench, ready for destruction of its form, Phillip L. Howell stepped into the shop and begged for its preservation out of respect for General Scott, and finally bought it for 75 cents.

Mr. Howell kept it at his home in Bentonville, then Rome and Wamsleys, all in Adams County, O., until within a month of his death when he gave it to his son, William Howell, from whom Colonel Jones obtained it, (but who still retains an interest in it).

The medal is three and one-half inches in diameter and five-eighths of an inch thick, and is made of pure Guinea gold and weighs twelve ounces. On one side is the name "Winfield Scott," with a bust of General Scott beneath, while below this is the following inscription:

THE COMMONWEALTH OF VIRGINIA
Presents this medal to
MAJOR GENERAL WINFIELD SCOTT
As a memorial of her admiration
For the great and distinguished
Services of her son
While Commander-in-Chief
Of the American armies in the War with Mexico.

On either side of the inscription are olive and laurel branches touching the wings of two American eagles, while captured flags, swords, spears and cannon also appear. Beneath these is the name of the maker, C. C. Wright, of New York, one of General Scott's old soldiers. On the reverse side is the motto: "Fecit Quod Cogitavit," above a beautiful column entwined by a wreath of laurels and olive branches. On the column appear the names of the battles fought by General Scott during the Mexican war, viz: "Veracruz, Cerro Gordo, Contreras, Cherebusco, Del Rio, Chapultepec, Mexico." On the base 1847, and on the capital 1848. An American eagle, holding a bunch of laurels in his beak, surmounts the column.

Below the column appears, "From Virginia," and beneath this an escutcheon bearing the coat of arms of Virginia. On either side of the column are scenes in Mexico, one of which shows the artillery in action and the army marching into the City of Mexico. High peaked mountains appear in the background, while the whole is encircled by a wreath of oak and laurel leaves. The medal is in a good state of preservation.

OUR NEIGHBORS.

WASHINGTON.

The tableaux on last night were just simply elegant, in every way a success. We cannot give praise enough to Mrs. Salie McDonald, Mrs. Charles A. Wood and Miss Mamie Lee Wood, for their very great success. "The Reaper" was splendid, Miss Nellie Wood in "Deluding to the cross" could not have been better. Also the piece recited was done to perfection. Miss Lucy Durrett in Iphigenia was exquisite. Mr. Hal Curran and Miss Mary Durrett, in the scene making love, could not have been more lovely. The wind-up with it all the picture scene was exquisite indeed.

The fourth quarterly meeting for this circuit, M. E. Church, South, was held Saturday and Sunday at Winter's Chapel, Rev. Geo. H. Pogue officiating. In the absence of the Elder.

Miss Lizzie Patterson, Miss Daisy Pollock and Miss Fannie Wilson, three charming ladies of Mason, visited Miss Alice Bullock, of Bracken, Sunday, and no doubt had a delightful time.

Mrs. Ebe Thompson and child accompanied Mrs. Maria Dickerson on her return home in Boone County Tuesday. William H. Dickerson, who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. Thompson, returned with them.

A certain elder just passed and wants me to send you a criticism on that infant baptism I mentioned last week. Don't you publish it Mr. Editor, not that we have any fear of a controversy on the subject, but he is an old man and we would dislike to devour him in toto.

Our public wells are proving a great blessing, and our city fathers should go to work immediately and have one dug at the upper end of Broadway, and one far out in the Bracken end of town. If they will enforce the laws against polluters of the same as they should do, there will be no lack of money.

Bold robbery close to home. As Charles Martin, a young man living at Bridgeville, was on his way home with some purchases he made in our town, he was held up at a point about two miles from here by two men who with a revolver compelled him to hand over his packages and a small sum of money.

In company with Judge T. M. Dora and wife, your correspondent spent a delightful day at the residence of Rev. George B. Pogue, in Brooksville, last Thursday. His accomplished daughter, Miss Little, rendered herself especially entertaining by the fluency and elegance of her conversation and her easy and graceful manner. We will be tempted to go again. "Oh, would I were a hoy again!"

THE Cincinnati Enquirer's correspondent at Millersburg is big on sensations. An old negro woman of that place got too much "festive" last Saturday night and died Sunday morning. The correspondent says: "Several claim it to be cholera, as the location where she lived is the part of town in which sixty-three died with the scourge in one week in 1873. There is great excitement, several having already taken sick from fear." All this cholera talk and excitement, without doubt, existed only in the mind of the correspondent.

SUDDEN DEATH.

An Explosion of a Champion Fire Extinguisher, With Fatal Results.

A Singular Accident at the Maysville Cotton Mills.

A sad and rather singular accident occurred at the Maysville Cotton Mills late yesterday afternoon.

About half-past 5 o'clock while the employes were all busy at their various posts of duty, fire was discovered in what is known as the "lapper-room." The blaze was a small one, having been discovered in its incipency. The material, however, in this room is very inflammable, and a fire here always requires very prompt action to prevent a destructive blaze. What are known as "Champion Fire Extinguishers" are therefore always kept at several places in the mill, for use in cases of emergency. These fire extinguishers are metal cylinders about three feet in length and eight or ten inches in diameter. They are charged with acids, which are kept separated until desired for use. By reversing or upending the cylinder the acids are mixed, and are thrown out with considerable force by means of the gas that is generated.

When the blaze last evening was discovered Melvin Monroe Wood and Richard Rice, two hands at work in the room, rushed for one of the extinguishers nearby, and seizing it started towards the fire. It had been upended and Rice called to Wood to turn it on, when suddenly it exploded with terrible force. The end was blown out striking Wood on the left side of the head and face and crushing his skull. A piece of the metal struck Wood in the side and inflicted another ghastly wound. The unfortunate young man was thrown to the floor by the explosion, and a convulsive twitching of the muscles was the only signs of life noticed after his body was picked up and carried down stairs.

Rice was also thrown to the floor by the explosion, but escaped any injury except some burns on his neck, caused by the acids, and slight bruises on his left arm and neck.

Charles Skinner, another employe, had seized one of the extinguishers and succeeded in putting out the blaze with but little trouble.

Coroner Cockrell was notified and held and inquest on Wood's remains a few hours later. The verdict of the jury was in accordance with the above facts. The body was afterwards conveyed to the home of the deceased's mother, who lives in the basement of Mr. Thomas Neal's residence on West Fourth street. Wood was about eighteen years of age, and was the main support of his mother and two younger brothers. The family came to this city from Fleming County not long ago. The deceased had been working in the mills about four weeks only, but had been in the employ of the Superintendent Mr. Bromley several months. He was an industrious, hard-working young fellow, and was well thought of by his employers and fellow-laborers.

His remains will be interred this afternoon. The expenses of the funeral and burial will be borne by the January & Wood Company, proprietors of the mills.

Kentucky Millers' Association.

The organization of the Kentucky Millers' Association was completed yesterday, at Lexington, by the election of officers and the adoption of a constitution and by-laws. The object of the association is to promote a more fraternal feeling among its members, and a more friendly rivalry. Heretofore the millers of Central Kentucky have been "cutting each other's throats," competition having been so lively.

Mr. James F. Robinson, of the "Old Gold Mills," was present yesterday, and the Pearce Milling Company was represented at the preliminary meeting of the association a few days ago by Mr. W. H. Sauvary.

Altogether about twenty-seven mills are represented in the association.

Stock, Field and Farm.

A good deal of the growing tobacco in Fleming County has been engaged in advance at $10 all round.

The farmers' Home Journal says: "We have the authority of John H. Mason, of Montgomery County, for the statement that tobacco set on Sunday comes to naught. The scrupulous Almighty won't recognize in the naughty weed any resemblance to the ox in the ditch. Two notable examples have come under Mr. Mason's notice, where two men set their plants on the holy day and just before cutting time the hail destroyed both crops."

In a letter to the BULLETIN, J. B. Frisette, of Pleasant Valley, Nicholas County, says: "Wheat is not up to an average; rye is generally good; oats will not be half a crop, if we don't have rain in a few days; tobacco will not be more than half-crop—we did not have any pounds for setting plants, and dry weather on what was set; corn is a good average and is looking well; garden truck is needing rain. I will say to you that your friend, who writes, has the best sixteen acre field of corn in Nicholas County. These are large words, but every one that has seen it says so, and I will leave the matter to my friends, of course."

The official figures of the tobacco crop of Kentucky for 1887, as reported to the Auditor of Public Accounts in the Assessors' returns for 1888, shows a decrease over the crop of 1886 of 136,890,786 pounds, or nearly 20,000,000 more pounds decrease than the entire crop of 1887. Graves County raised the largest crop for both years, but for 1887 there was a diminished yield as compared with 1886 of 2,702,109 pounds. The greatest falling off is shown in Daviess County, where the crop of 1888 did not equal the crop of 1886 by 4,706,560 pounds. Christian shows a decreased yield of 4,682,400 pounds; Henderson 5,240,800 pounds; Hopkins, 3,868,537 pounds; Owen, 3,193,150 pounds; Union, 3,152,900 pounds; Warren, 3,102,282 pounds, and Webster 3,208,255 pounds.—Exchange.

M. A. Kelley's $30,000.

Much interest was shown in various ways in the tax receiver of Pittston, Mr. M. A. Kelley's, fortunate investments and it has been deemed of public interest to find out what he thinks about it. Learning that Mr. Kelley had received $30,000 through the Miners' Saving Bank, a reporter interviewed him. He said he simply bought one-fifth of ticket No. 55,315 which drew the Capital Prize of $150,000 in the May drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery, for which he paid $2, just as he would have put up a margin on stock, and he was surprised to learn there were men in town who knew the value of the ticket a week before he was advertised.—Pittston (Pa.) The call of the various committees having been concluded unanimously consent was given to Chairman Green, of the Nebraska delegation, to present Gen. John C. Fremont to the convention. Mr. Green, with the voice of a tragedian, referred to the first Republican convention, those who participated in it who had passed away, and to the fact that the great leader selected by that convention had been spared to be with them to-day. He was admonished to be brief by the convention shouting loudly for Fremont.

When the veteran came to the front most of the delegates got on their feet and the applause was general. The Pathfinder spoke in a clear, strong tone. He thanked the convention for its reception. Pride and gratification, he said, filled his bosom and his joy that the party with which he had been so prominently identified in his early days had risen to the position it occupied to-day was unspeakable.

Fred Douglass was then called for and responded in a short speech, after which the crowd called for Ingels, but if present he refused to show himself.

Then they called for Foraker, but the laugh was turned on those who expected a speech, as he simply moved that the roll of the committeemen be read for verification by the secretary. Then, with a smile that indicated his sense of pleasure at having outwitted the audience, he sat down and the secretary waded drearily through the list of peculiar names.

At 3:31 the convention adjourned until 12 o'clock Wednesday.

THE LADIES, GOD BLESS 'EM!

They Are in Numerous Attendance at the Convention.

CHICAGO, June 19.—The woman's suffrage party seemed to enlist as valiantly as any of the other factions in pressing their cause at the convention. They opened headquarters at the Sherman house. There Miss Susan B. Anthony and Isabella Beecher Hooker marshalled their forces to attack the Republican platform makers and compel them to insert a suffrage plank. If their wish is granted they promise a large number of handsome woman suffrage orators to stomp the land and offset the influence of the mistress of the White House in the affections of the present voters.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE HEADQUARTERS.

Enthusiasm For Mrs. Logan.
CHICAGO, June 19.—Mrs. John A. Logan is attracting much attention—possibly more than any one of the numerous candidates. She called on Mrs. S. B. Elkins at the Grand Pacific, and in a few minutes the news had spread and there was a great crowd of distinguished men to see her. Mrs. Logan has a rare faculty of being able to call by name about every person she has ever met, and in consequence was an invaluable assistant to her late husband in all political campaigns.

The impromptu reception over, Mr. and Mrs. Elkins started to accompany Mrs. Logan to dinner. The moment that the trio emerged from Mr. Elkins' apartments and Mrs. Logan was recognized, politicians of every degree and hundreds of old soldiers pressed forward to obtain a word or look or handshake from the lady who was so familiar to them all. As a display of enthusiasm and sympathy the result was unrivaled in the many stirring outbursts that are incidents of the convention. It required fully an hour for Mrs. Logan, aided by the strong arm and herculean presence of Elkins, to push a passage through the eager throng into the dining hall.

Mrs. Logan hopes to see Gen. Alger receive the nomination.

Fair Harrison Boomers.

CHICAGO, June 19.—Amid the pleasant scenes about the headquarters of the various candidates there was no prettier sight than that of a quartet of young married beauties at the Harrison headquarters. They were Mrs. Lovett, daughter of Will Cumber; Mrs. Harkness, wife of State Senator Harkness; Mrs. Griffin and Mrs. John W. Scott, all of Hoosierdom. They put in a full day of eight hours and did yeoman service with their dainty fingers in decorating the coat lapsels of the visitors with Harrison badges, and the ever-changing crowd that passed through the parlors indicated that the innovation worked like a charm.

Hidden in Gloom.

CHICAGO, June 19.—The opening day of the convention arrived without adding a ray of light to help the observer penetrate the profound uncertainty in which the situation has been enveloped ever since Mr. Blaine, the central star of the Republican firmament, with drew and left the political sky to the minor luminaries; each of the latter has kept up his little twinkle.

The Pacific coast delegations do not mince matters. They began by shouting that they must have Blaine and no one else, and have modified this only so far as to say that at all events they must not hurt Sherman. They have convinced everybody but the Sherman delegates that the nomination of a man with Sherman's record on the Chinese question means the loss of the whole Pacific coast and the consequent sure defeat of the party.

Harrison and Allison are in about the same boat with Sherman on that question, but have not attracted the special fire of the coast men, and possibly will not until the latter have slaughtered the Ohio senator.

These two and Alger appear on the surface to hold their own, while the latter is generally conceded to have picked up a good many scattering votes from various states, which will drop in groups after a ballot or two. On the whole, the Michigan candidate has made more progress than any other, but like all the others, is a long way from certainty.

New York still hangs back and utters no clear sound. Her determination to cast her first ballot solid for Dewey is not regarded by anybody as a serious indication of her ultimate purpose. Meanwhile the great luminary who voluntarily sunk below the horizon is in everybody's mind here, and frequently his beams shoot up in such refugeance as to threaten a rising.

The local atmosphere of Chicago is Blaine-ish in spite of the Gresham boom. There are more cheers for Blaine among the crowds than for anybody else, and the air of the convention city is full of rumors of plots to spring his name on the convention at an opportune moment and sweep the great body off its legs. It is by no means certain that Blaine will not be the nominee, and many are willing to put up their money on the prediction that he will be.

Chauncey I. Filley and His Hat.
CHICAGO, June 19.—Chauncey I. Filley, of St. Louis, the chairman of the Missouri delegation, is chief among the convention characters. His hat is a Republican mascot. He has worn it to every Republican convention since 1856, but it is remembered that four years ago he did not wear it continuously while here. Be that as it may, he now sticks to the hat and the hat to him as tightly as if

C. I. FILLEY. They were glued to each other. The only time he parts with it is during meals, when his wife draws the line and insists on it being removed, no matter what ill-luck may befall his party.

Colonel D. C. Putnam Dead.
SPRINGFIELD, O., June 19.—Col. D. C. Putnam, of the Ohio Grand Army, died Monday night of inflammatory rheumatism. He was born near Fitchburg, Mass., March 10, 1844; enlisted March 10, 1862, in the Twenty-fifth Massachusetts Infantry; was in the North Carolina campaigns and the battles of Kingston, Whitehall, Goldsboro, Gum Swamp and Cold Harbor; was wounded in the latter battle, and after serving three years and being promoted to the rank of lieutenant he was mustered out. He taught school, after which he went into business and became one of Springfield's leading citizens. Col. Putnam was first commander of Mitchell post, and for three years a member of the State Grand Army council of administration and mustering officer for eight counties. He leaves a wife and three children.

The race will be rowed August 2. A match was also made to-day between George W. Lee, of New York, and H. D. Wise, of Toronto, for $500 aside, for three miles, date to be decided upon hereafter.

What Salisbury Wants.
LONDON, June 19.—In the house of lords yesterday evening, Lord Salisbury offered a bill proposing that only three life peers should be appointed yearly to be drawn as judges of the superior court; rear admirals, major generals, ambassadors and privy counsellors to the queen also having power to appoint two others yearly, who are not so qualified.
